An Ideal Dinner.

Many readers of the GAZETTE and numerous others who miss so much by not subscribing thereto, know Col. John McCaull, who represented Roanoke in the House of Delegates in years gone by, but who subse quently and sensibly gave up politics and went into theatricals, and who, with his excellent opera troups was in Washington last week, was given a dinner at Chamberlin's at which there were plates for five. The dinner was a very simple one, consisting of Lynn Haven Bay oysters, roasted in the shell, opened at the table and eaten off hot plates, with butter and such other seasoning as might be desided by each individual din-er; a Buck's county, Pa., capon, weighing eleven and three quarter pounds when dressed, roasted and served, with Irish po-tatoes roasted in the skins; a ham three years old, baked and cold, supplied from the home of Gen. Mahone; champagne from start to finish, coffee and cheese. It required just two hours to dispose of this brief menu, and to say it was well done is hardly to do justice to the sub-ject. There is no judge of good eating who does not know that this dinner, simple as it was, would be enough to tempt the appe-tite of a king. There is in fact not a king on earth who knows the deliciousness of a roasted Lynn Haven Bay oyster, or of a Buck's county capon or one of Gen. Mahone's three year-old hams. Col. John McCaull is not far behind Chamberlin in knowing a good thing to eat when he sees it. He was breught up in Southern Virginia, and says the Chesapeake Eay and the neighboring rivers furnish more expenive delicacies than any other part of the world, for therein and thereabouts may be found the soft shell crab, the Potomac shad the canvas-back duck, the diamond-back terrapin and the Lynn Haven Bay oyster McCaull tells the story of a dinner be at tended some years ago, which consisted of Lynn Haven Bay oysters roasted, devilled crabs, terrapin and canvas back duck. One of the guests present, a young man from Massachusotts, asked, after the dinner was over, what there was for dessert. This almost knocked McCoulled his rest, and he came are the control of the cont Caull off his seat, and he came very near proposing to throw the young pie-eater out of the window. Mr. McCaull now drinks nothing; but four or five years ago he was in the habit of saying that the most delightful combination he knew of for a hot sum-mer afternoon was an ice-cold pineappie with a hole dug out of the centre and cham

General Mahone is noted for his excellent old hams. Every now and then he sends out to a friend with careful directions as to how it should be cooked, and he never fails to hear a good report of it. His hams are from Smithfield, a little place not far from where he lives in Virginia. These hams are very small and are cured with great care. The flavor of these hama is said to be due to the fact that the pigs from which they are made are fed principally on pea-nuts, which greatly abound in the vicinity of Smithfield.

FRITZ'S LOVE-MAKING .- In 1865, shortly after the Bohemian campaign, the late Frederick William visited Carlsbad, the most popular German resort. Traveling incognite, he was able to in dulge his taste for simplicity, and took rooms in the upper story of a house of a burger-frau, to whom, in time, he became very communicative. "What a dear good woman my wife is," he said one day, after perusing the daily packet: "she is an excellent housewife, careful of everything, superintending the kitchen as well as the ball room.
